

IN DIXIE LAND.

in blue challenged the admiration not only of the American people; but liberty loving people throughout the world, as well." A race so true to its flag as we have been, remembering God and his teaching, will in the end be more than conquerors." The picture painted by Miss Burroughs in which she showed the audience our boys climbing San Juan Hill will live forever fresh in the memory of all who heard it.

A spontaneous outburst of applause followed the close of this most excellent lecture. Miss Ella D. Thomas came forward holding in her hands a most beautiful bouquet which she most fittingly presented to Miss Burroughs on behalf of the Alumni Association. The reply of Miss Burroughs was eloquent and appropriate. Some high class selections were rendered by some of the best musical talent of the school and the cultured audience dispersed.

It is impossible in an article like this to give even a faint idea of the greatness of this lecture, and grandeur of the speaker's diction and the oratorical flights which were as easy and natural as water running from a babbling brook. Miss Burroughs struck the keynote when she told her audience if the Negro ever secured their rights it would be because they had lived consistent Christian lives in accordance with the teaching of the Bible.

Everybody who is conversant with the real conditions South know that the prejudice to the Negro on account of color has driven a large number from their God and has caused everybody to look on his religion with suspicion. That you may understand we note the following: Some time since two young women of education were preparing to leave the city. One was the wife of a minister; the other a teacher. A young man of prominence in church circles, himself a teacher went to the depot to see them off. The moment he was seen by one of the women he was told to return at once that they were traveling as white women. Of course this Sunday school teacher and Christian worker left and had more respect for his friends and co-workers than ever before. Ask the average to repeat the Ten Commandments, he will do so readily but should you ask him if it is not a sin against God and his parents, as well, to deny his race identity thus turning his back on his own mother just to ride with white people, seven out of ten will tell you it is no harm in practicing such deception. They have not as yet learned to suffer and bear these unjust discriminations for His sake but they allow prejudice to force them to lie and steal more quickly than they will tell the truth. Every time one denies his race identity regardless of what motive that may prompt him to do so, whether it be to ride in a sleeper or what not, he is lying and stealing a privilege to which he is not entitled. If for nothing else his dishonesty should keep the door of hope forever closed in his face.

Miss Burroughs will never be forgotten in Memphis. At the close of her speech children kissed her, women almost pulled her from the stand and men threw coins at her feet, and bade her the heartiest God speed ever tendered a speaker in the history of Memphis. Such demonstrations have never been witnessed in Memphis before and perhaps never will be again until Miss Burroughs returns, which the alumni of Howe and the Congo League are hoping to persuade her to do.
